For the inſpection of the CURIOUS, there is now ſit imported into this province, one of Mr. BENJAMIN MARTIN'S which, excluſive of its much ſuperior effect produced by a continual ſtream, has alſo a property above all others of working without friction, therefore not ſubject to wear, nor choak, which the common ones are conſtantly liable to, and the fatal conſequences in ſhips, too well known. On examination, they will be found to be extremely uſeful to this province, particularly for the draining of ſwamps, and filling the indico vats, as the laſt requires the utmoſt expedition; they have already been fixed to ſhips, agreeable to the approbation of ſome reſpectable gentlemen in the Jamaica trade, and many of them have been ſent to different parts of Europe for that purpoſe.——To be ſeen as above, where orders for them will be tranſmitted to the manufactory in London.

LONDON, June 4.

DVICES received in town from Neufchatel in Switzerland say, that the four cantons of Bern, Lucern, Friburg & Soleure, were going to send 900 men to Neufchatel, not to punish the people, as has been misrepresented in some public papers, but in a friendly manner, to help (in case of need) the magistrate of that place to bring to justice the persons concerned in killing the late patriot Gaudot. The troops were expected at Neufchatel the 20th of May. They are to live at the expence of the cantons that send them; and have orders to behave quietly, to do no outrage, and to be very orderly: consequently the citizens of Neufchatel have agreed to receive them civilly, and as friends.—It must further be observed, that these citizens do not deserve the bad assertions that have been thrown against them.

Rice flour mixed with wheat flour answers the purpose of allum, with respect to giving a whiteness to bread; but it requires a little longer time for rising.

The late Earl of Eg——t died suddenly; on which a scandalous report was immediately circulated that he had destroyed himself. The fact is as follows: His Lordship had the misfortune to burst a blood-vessel—a physician was sent for, whom the Earl addressed to this effect: Tell me candidly, Sir, is my life in imminent danger? The physician answered like an honest man, Your Lordship is as certainly a dead man, as if you had shot yourself through the head with a pistol. The word pistol overheard, and imprudently repeated by an officious servant, gave rise to a report, that his Lordship had shot himself.

Corsica is now the subject of much discourse. We hear that the French persist in their design of taking possession of it for themselves, which hath occasioned much alteration between our ambassador in France, and the French ministry.

We also further hear, that our government are resolved to oppose them in their intentions, but hitherto are not agreed in the manner of doing it. A gentleman, well acquainted with the island, went yesterday to Hayes, of his own accord, to Lord Chatham, to give him an account of the same.

The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and the Lord Mayor of Dublin, so perfectly coincide in their manners and sentiments, that the Lord Lieutenant visits the Lord Mayor, and a few select friends very frequently incog. where they unbend themselves from the cares of their respective offices, and enjoy the pleasures of Irish sociality.

It has been remarked, that Lord Camden was not invited at a late festival given to the nobility in general, and the great officers of state. It is said his Lordship had referred a great officer who applied to him for advice, to another officer in the same department, whose business it was to give advice.

June 6. Saturday Mr. Wilkes entertained his friends with a turtle fee dinner, in honour of his Majesty's birth-day.

The Right Honourable the Earl of Chatham is said now to enjoy a better state of health than his Lordship has done for these five years past.

We hear that a fleet is going to be fitted out at Portsmouth for the Mediterranean.

We are told from Vienna, that the Emperor is greatly dissatisfied with the condition wherein he has found the works and fortifications of most of the places in Hungary, notwithstanding great sums have been lately appropriated for the reparation of them. Several persons who were charged with the direction of those works, it seems, are put under arrest.

On Wednesday evening another pair of Indissolvable Lovers were found on a hay-cock near Kentish Town; it appears that the lady was a Jealous Wife, whom her Suspicious Husband had driven to Love's Last Shift, as a Revenge for his having played a part in The London Cuckold.

Extract of a letter from Gibraltar, dated May 9.

"We seem to be very near a rupture with the Emperor of Morocco, whose ambassador is now here, waiting for a categorical answer to the demand he makes for the corn shipped by the inhabitants of Gibraltar at Tetuan, on the coast of Barbary, a place which acknowledges no subjection to the Emperor; and he allowed 48 hours only for our Governor to determine in, threatening, on refusal, to lay double duties on all provisions destined for this place, and to fit out cruisers and seize British property to the amount of his demand, or to detain the English ships now in his country. This day he is to have their final answer, and to have audience of leave. Several people here think a good drubbing will be the best means to bring them to reason. Last night a vessel was dispatched for Tetuan, in order to bring over our consul Mr. Popham, and all the British subjects there; and we are in expectation of our communication being soon shut up. Some say that the Spaniards have excited the emperor to this new demand."

June 8. The merchants and principal traders of London met yesterday morning at the King's arms tavern, Cornhill, and received the report of the committee appointed to prepare a petition to parliament for a more enlarged importation of provisions; and the said petition being approved, will be presented at the first meeting of the house of commons, in November.

We hear it is resolved not to submit to the arbitrary demands of the Emperor of Morocco.

Sunday last died at Marlborough, on his journey to Bath, George Cooke, Esq; one of the Knights of the Shire for the county of Middlesex, one of the paymasters of his Majesty's forces, colonel of the Western battalion of the Middlesex militia, and prothonotary of the court of common pleas.

Serjeant Glyn and Sir William Beauchamp Proctor, it is said, will offer themselves as candidates, in the room of Mr. Cooke.

Letters received on Monday from Paris import, that the embarkation of the troops for Corsica would be made sooner than was expected; and that the Duke de Louzun, the Count de Buzancois, and several other young noblemen, had desired permission to accompany the Marquis de Chauvelin to that island; which request the King had granted to a limited number.

When Mr. Wilkes appeared before the court of King's Bench, and the —— —— —— declared Mr. Wilkes was not before him ——. A gentleman asked the counsel Ambassador, then present, whether he did not think it very extraordinary? The Ambassador replied—No, not in England. In my country it would have been very extraordinary; for we believe in the real presence.

It is commonly reported of Charles the Second (who was well known to be a great patroller of the streets) that, passing by Palace-yard, Westminster, he observed a great number of people assembled together, the reason of which he asked of a Nobleman that was with him.—Please your Majesty, answered he, it is only a man standing in the pillory, for publishing what was deemed a libel against your Ministers.—Fool, replied the King, he should have writ it against me, then it would not have been noticed; but how did he expect to escape ministerial vengeance?

Extract of a letter from a London rider, dated Annan May 27.

"So great is the infatuation of the people on this side the Sark, which divides the two kingdoms, that they will not believe that Mr. Wilkes was ever elected member for Middlesex; and their resentment to him is, if possible, still greater. Last week at Ecclefechan, a market town four miles from hence, they had him executed in effigy. They had given notice of their intentions a week or two before, and fixed the execution on a fair day, when a gallows was erected in the street, and poor Wilkes (a figure as large as the life) was brought upon horseback to the fatal tree, where he was hoisted up, and after hanging a few minutes, was shot through and through. This done, he was cut down and burnt, amidst the acclammations of some thousands of spectators. In short, it is very dangerous to mention his name in this country. I have lost a good order already by only throwing in a word or two in his favour, and hope this may serve as a caution to all my brother whips.—At Dumfries they speak in moderation, and seem not to have bartered all their sense and reason for prejudice and nationality. London bills are at forty-five days, which, it is said, is in compliment to our great patriot."

June 9. Should the Emperor of Morocco commit any insult on the British flag in the Mediterranean, it is said a squadron of our men of war will be dispatched on an expedition to bombard Magador, Larache, Salles, and some other principal ports both within and without the Straits.

The corporation of Aylesbury have erected a flag upon the town-hall, with an inscription of Wilkes and Liberty in gold letters.

We are informed from Edinburgh, that yesterday fortnight the canal between Forth and Clyde, was begun to be dug a little to the Eastward of Dunipace, and that a great number of hands were employed.

They advise from Leghorn, that a squadron of French men of war was daily expected in the seas of Corsica; the commander of which was said to have received orders to permit no ships of that nation to hoist any other than the flag of Genoa.

June 10. Wednesday afternoon Mr. Wilkes's counsel and solicitor attended at the King's Bench prison, and settled the farther proceedings against Lord Halifax, which were suspended by the outlawry.

Wednesday morning, at eight, Mr. Wilkes was brought from the prison of King's Bench to the court. The judges came about nine. It had been mentioned the last term, that new ground might be taken for the reversal of the outlawry. At the opening of the court, Mr. Wilkes made a short speech, that he was perfectly satisfied with the state of the argument, as it was left by Serjeant Glynn, that he did not mean to quit the firm and solid ground on which it rested, and was persuaded, from the justice of the court, that his outlawry must be reversed. The Attorney-general then in support of the outlawry entered upon a very long argument, to which no one of Mr. Wilkes's council replied. The judges afterwards delivered their opinions very fully, and were unanimous, that the outlawry was illegal, and must be reversed. Their lordships differed as to their reasons, but all concurred in the irregularity of the proceedings.

The Attorney General then demanded judgment on the two virdicts. Mr. Wilkes desired to avail himself of several points in arrest of judgment. He said, that when he had the honour of appearing before that court on the 20th of April, he had stated the case of the alteration of the records at Lord Mansfield's own house; that his Lordship had replied; but that, however, his Lordship had delivered only his own opinion, and the opinion of one judge, however distinguished for great ability, he apprehended, was not the judgment of this court, which he desired, and submitted to, and begged that his council might argue that and some other points of importance. Several things were afterwards mentioned by the Attorney-General, and by Mr. Wilkes's council. At last the court fixed next Tuesday to debate, whether both verdicts ought not to be set aside on the objections as to the records having been altered, and that the informations were not filed by the proper officers, but by the Solicitor-General.

Wednesday night there were great illuminations and rejoicings in the King's Bench prison, on account of Mr. Wilkes having obtained the reversal of his outlawry.

They write from Algier, that the Dey had demanded a large supply of gun-powder and naval stores, by way of present from the British consul; in consequence of which, that gentleman, had transmitted dispatches to his court.

June 13. Letters from Rome advise, that upon the Pope's refusal to withdraw the brief against the Duke of Parma, the ministers of France and Spain said, "Your holiness must not then be surprized if you should soon hear the news of Avignon, Castro, and Ronciglione being taken."

The Error assigned for the reversal of Mr. Wilkes's outlawry, was, that the proceedings stated at the County Court for the County of Middlesex, whereas the form ought to have been at the County Court of Middlesex for the County of Middlesex.

They write from Portsmouth, that when the news of Mr. Wilkes's outlawry being reversed came to that town, the greatest joy was expressed by all ranks of people; the bells began ringing, and continued till late at night. Before it grew well dark the town was illuminated, and bonfires were made.

Last Saturday a meeting was held by several great persons on an extraordinary affair, which, we are informed, broke up without coming to any determination, the suffrages for and against being equally divided.

June 14. Sunday the right honourable Lord Viscount Weymouth took the Sacrament, at Mr. Martin's church, to qualify himself as one of his Majesty's principal Secretary's of State.

About half past eight o'clock yesterday morning, Mr. Wilkes arrived at the court of King's-bench, Westminster-hall, and about half an hour after that time the Judges came into court, when the arguments on the arrest of judgment were entered on, by Mr. attorney-general, Mr. Thurlow, and Sir Fletcher Norton, on behalf of the crown; and by Mr. serjeant Glynn, Mr. Recorder of London, and Mr. Davenport, on the part of the defendant. Mr. serjeant Glynn argued further than he had before done on the impropriety of the information being filed by the solicitor-general; but the court were so clearly of opinion the business of the attorney-general (in case of there being a vacancy in that office) must necessarily devolve on the solicitor-general, that it was judged needless to say more on that head.——The whole that Mr. Wilkes then had to avail himself of, was, the alteration of the record; which having been very learnedly and elaborately canvassed, the court declared themselves fully of opinion, that the alteration of the record at the judge's chambers, was what they had an indispensible right to in the course of practice. After this the informations against Mr. Wilkes were read; and Lord Mansfield stated to the court the evidence as it stood on the former trial; when Mr. Attorney-General, and Sir Fletcher Norton gave their opinions in the case, and Mr. Serjeant Glynn answered in extenuation. Mr. Wilkes then desired that judgment might be passed, but was told that the court having heard the opinion of council on sides, and some material observations having been offered, it was necessary to take these into consideration; but was assured, that though no day could then be fixed for that purpose, no time should be delayed to bring it to an issue.

A little after five o'clock Mr. Wilkes left the court, and went as privately as possible to the King's bench prison, so that he was attended by very few of the populace.

The number of persons who assembled in Westminster-Hall is incredible; and considering the concourse, were remarkably quiet.

London, June 17. It is said Lord Clare will be appointed vice-treasurer of Ireland, in the room of Mr. Rigby; and Lord Hillsborough, first lord of trade, and to continue secretary for the colonies.

An express having arrived on Wednesday from Paris, at the house of the French ambassador, in Great George-street, yesterday morning his Excellency had a long conference with the Earl of Shelburne, on the subject of the dispatches received thereby.

A foreigner observes of the English, "that with their boasted pretensions to friendship and humanity, no sooner is any one of them reduced to misfortunes, than his acquaintance all leave him to extricate himself, or perish—as it may happen."

June 18. This morning Mr. Wilkes received judgment at the bar of the court of King's-bench, for re-publishing the North Briton, No. 45, for which he was sentenced to pay a fine of 500 l. and to suffer 10 months imprisonment; and also for publishing the Essay on Woman; for which he is to pay a fine of 500 l. more, and to suffer 12 months imprisonment, in all 22 months; and besides to find security for his good behaviour for seven years, himself bound in 2000 l. and two securities in 500 l. each.

Among other proceedings in regard to Mr. Wilkes on Tuesday last, Mr. Serjeant Glynn took notice, that as a writ of error was intended to be brought before a higher court of justice, before the house of Lords, he desired that the case of the alteration of the records, under such particular circumstances, might be stated on the back of the record, to be transmitted to the Lords, otherwise that important point could not be before the house. This was refused by the court.

Mr. Wilkes then offered bail, but was refused.

Several freeholders of Middlesex having again applied to Mr. Wilkes, to know whom he recommended to the county on the present vacancy, he gave the same answer as before; only added, that, indeed, he warmly wished Mr. Serjeant Glynn success, because he knew that gentleman to be a true friend of this country, and to possess several superior abilities, which he had always exerted in the cause of liberty; that, however, the object of the county's choice he should respect, and endeavour to live with, whoever he was, on the most friendly terms, as his colleague.

On Saturday last twelve cooks, fifteen milliners, and twenty-three perequiers, were safely landed at Union-stairs, from France—to the great emolument of this kingdom.

Yesterday the Earl of Hillsborough and Lord Clare had the honour to kiss his Majesty's hand; the former on being appointed first lord of trade, and the latter on being appointed joint vice-treasurer of Ireland.

A war is again talked of by many of our politicians as utterly unavoidable.

We are told that large bodies of the French forces are ordered down to the sea coasts; a circumstance which gives much ground for political speculation.

The papers seem all to have adopted a wrong term respecting the division the other day about Mr. Wilkes. Expulsion never came under consideration, nor could it; for a man cannot be expelled from whence he never was: Mr. Wilkes never took his seat for Middlesex, the debate was on the subject of rejection, and that was carried in the negative by a majority of one.

It is generally thought that some great names are at the bottom of the libels which have been lately published on our courts of judicature.

We are told that some merchants of great eminence have a plan to lay before the government, which is likely to effect a happy accommodation, between the mother-country and the American colonies.

A letter was received on Tuesday by a book and printseller in St. Clement's church-yard, in which the writer said, "Having several times lately had occasion to pass by your house, and observing up in your windows for sale, sundry pictures, representing the Scotch nation (in general) in a most ridiculous, contemptible, and degrading manner, which must have been designed and executed by some most ignorant, inflammatory, and abusive wretch, who knows nothing (neither) of that country nor its inhabitants. Therefore take this as a warning, that if you do not cease from exposing them to sale in such a public manner, before Thursday next, (when I shall make it my business to pass by your house) thank yourself for the consequence, which you may depend, shall be death to you, and destruction to your family, from one who has power and resolution to put in execution the celebrated motto of the arms of his country, viz. Nemo me impune lacessit.

A SCOTCHMAN."

Mr. WILKES's ADDRESS

To the Gentlemen, Clergy, and Freeholders of the County of Middlesex.

Gentlemen,

AFTER every kind of opposition from the tools of ministerial power, and every hour of delay which could be gained by the chicane of law, I find myself at last happy, even under this day's severe sentence, that by the unanimous determination of all the judges of the court of King's Bench, I am restored to my birth-right, to the noble liberties and privileges of an Englishman. The Outlawry which is now reversed, has appeared clearly to be an act of equal injustice and cruelty, from the very beginning erroneous and illegal. In the whole progress of ministerial vengeance against me for several years, I have shewn, to the conviction of all mankind, that my enemies have trampled on the laws, and been actuated by the spirit of tyranny and arbitrary power. The General Warrant, under which I was first apprehended, has been adjudged illegal. The seizure of my papers was condemned judicially. The Case Lowry, so long the topic of virulent abuse, is at last declared to have been contrary to law, and on the ground first taken by my learned counsel, Mr. serjeant Glynn, is formally reversed. It still remains in this public cause that the justice of the nation should have place against the first and great criminal, the late secretary of state, Lord Halifax, not so much for the punishment he has merited, as for the example of terror to any present or future minister, who might otherwise be tempted to invade the sacred liberties of our country. I pledge myself to you that my strongest efforts shall be exerted to carry this through with a spirit and firmness becoming an affair of national consequence, yet without the smallest degree of private rancour or malice, which neither my long and hard imprisonment, nor the past provocations, shall make me harbour against any man.

After this tedious and harsh confinement, I hope gentlemen, to pass the rest of my life a freeman among you, my freeborn countrymen; and give me leave to declare that on every emergency, whenever the rights of the people are attacked, I shall be ready to stand forward, and to risk all for what is nearest to my heart, the freedom of England. In this glorious cause we are equally engaged. We have only one common interest, that of our country, it's laws and liberties, and, in consequence, the preservation of our sovereign, and the Brunswic line. These objects we will steadily pursue, and freedom shall not perish among us, neither by the fate of arms, while we remain men and Englishmen.

I observe, gentlemen, in the speech of the lords commissioners at the opening of this parliament that no Matters of general business are to come on this session. Before the winter I beg to be honoured with your commands for the next session on any points of importance, which you may judge proper to be submitted to the great council of the nation, either respecting the kingdom in general, or our county in particular. In all our common concerns I entreat for myself your candour and indulgence, of which I feel that I stand in great need. My views however will be approved by you, for they shall be public spirited, and in no instance selfish or partial. I would not for a moment lie under suspicion of a mean, private, interested plan of conduct, or personal ambition. I am determined to remain entirely independent, uncorrupted, even unbiass'd in an improper manner, and never to accept from the crown either place, pension, gratuity, or emolument of any kind. I will live and die in your service, a private gentleman, perfectly free, under no controul but the laws, under no influence but yours, and I hope, by your favour and kindness, one of the representatives in parliament for the county of Middlesex. On these terms only I expect through life the continuance of your support, as well as the favourable opinion of you, and all other good men, the friends of liberty, and of my country.

I am,

With Gratitude and Esteem,

Gentlemen,

King's Bench Prison, Your faithful and obedient
Saturday, June 18, 1768. humble Servant,

JOHN WILKES.

June 21. We hear that our ambassador at a certain court has been ordered to demand a categorical answer with regard to the designs of that court on the island of Corsica; and that contrary to all expectation, instead of the Retort courteous, he had receiv'd the Reply valiant.

This day both houses of parliament will meet agreeable to their last adjournment.

The Jason Frigate is arrived at Plymouth, from the Downs; on board which ship Sir William Trelawney, governor of Jamaica, will embark in a few days.

It is said that the writ of error for Mr. Wilkes was signed on Saturday last, and that it is expected to pass the seal this day.

THEY are useful in all diseases of the stomach and bowels, where there is no formed fever. The inventor wishes not to impose on the public; let their effects when tried, establish their character. If from feasting or a debauch, from eating too much fruit, or too many vegetables, from too great a variety or quantity of food, or from drinking bad wine, cyder, beer, punch, or spirituous liquors of any kind; if from a costive habit, a deficiency of bile, tough phlegm, cold or wet feet, too thin cloathing, or too little sleep; if from any or more of such like causes, the stomach or bowels are disordered, one, two, or three of these pills, taken at any hour of the day or night, will procure immediate relief, require not the least confinement, and are very useful at sea, by keeping the body regularly open.

They are also the best physick for pale complexions, and at the turn of life; and are of great service in bringing an ill-formed gout to a regular fit.

N. B. Nothing procures sleep so readily, or so effectually takes off that restlessness which arises from a stomach loaded at night with too much food or drink.
